Biodiesel maker

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

After a selection process involving interested manufacturers of "biodiesel" fuel, the Port of Sacramento has settled on a contract with California's Primafuel Inc. to create a biodiesel plant on ten acres of port property in Sacramento.

The deal will bring the port about $1.1 million in fees from the land lease and shipping.

Primafuel, based in Long Beach, plans to build a "feedstock flexible" plant, able to use oil-seeds to create 60 million gallons per year of a fuel touted as lower in pollutants than traditional diesel fuel. The fuel can be blended with diesel, according to the port, or it can be used on its own in modern diesel engines.

"As a California-based company, Primafuel is proud to be working with the Port of Sacramento to develop a truly world-class biodiesel production and significant research and development company," said CEO Richard Root Woods in a press release.

The port's governing board is controlled by West Sacramento.

Port manager Mike Luken last month told the News-Ledger that choosing a biodiesel maker would be partly based on how much the manufacturer pledges to use the waterway for its materials and product.

"At least for the short-term," Luken said yesterday, "the raw materials will be coming in by barge. Product will go out a variety of different ways. Some of the product will be going out by truck or rail. Not a lot: they only project 17 trucks per day and a few railcars per week."

Port commissioner and city councilman Wes Beers said he is confidant the new plant will be a good neighbor.

"I'm generally favorable that this is a good opportunity for both West Sacramento and the port," he said, adding that problems like odor are not expected. "It's all controllable. They will have to have an (environmental impact report) done anyway, and anything like that will have to be mitigated. There don't seem to be any red flags."

Also on tap at the port are new terminals planned for Pan Pacific Cement and Cemex Cement, reported port manager Luken.

CORRECTION

Last week's News-Ledger referred to a new elementary school under construction in Southport as the district's first charter school.

The school near Stonegate Drive won't be a charter school; it is planned to be one of the district's first kindergarten-through-eighth grade schools after opening as a K-7 school its first year.

The pair – suffering gashes that may have come from a boat propeller – lingered in the freshwater long enough to draw attention from rescuers, spectators and international media. They ignored an attempt to lure them back to the San Francisco Bay on Thursday, but left on their own on Sunday when two tugboats at the port motored a few hundred yards away to service a ship at the nearby Agrium fertilizer dock.

As of yesterday, the whales were loitering around Rio Vista, trailed by rescuers hoping to keep

Property owners asked to pay for flood protection

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

Ballots went into the mail yesterday for West Sacramento property owners, asking approval for a 30-year assessment to help upgrade local levees.

The measure has no organized opposition and few public critics. It hopes to raise over $40 million from local homeowners and commercial property owners. Paired with a similar amount expected from new developer fees, West Sacramento flood officials hope to come up with an over 20-percent "local match" towards about $420 million in levee improvements. About 80 percent of the repairs are expected to be funded by state and federal agencies, if West Sacramento's entreaties are successful.

Once proud of their flood protection, West Sacramento city and reclamation district officials have – like others in the region – been shocked by new research showing they have much less protection than previously thought. A city once striving for "400 year" flood protection, West Sacramento is now probably below "100 year" levels. Officials hopes that the new round of levee work brings the area up to "200 year" levels.

A 200-year level of flood protection means there is a one-in-200 chance of flooding in a given year.

West Sacramento's city council members are among those in favor of the flood assessment.

Councilman Wes Beers, a Southport resident, thinks his annual homeowner's assessment will come to under $130. But he hasn't bothered to find out for sure.

"I didn't even look it up," said Beers. "I think it will come to about the $120 or $130 range. I look at this as $10 or $12 per month, and that's a pretty small investment for peace of mind."

Beers said he is "pretty upbeat" about the measure's chance of passage. The assessment needs "50 percent plus one" approval. Voting power is weighted higher for those with higher assessments. Those annual assessments are determined by property size, "zone" of flood threat and type of land use. Commercial landowners will have the highest assessments rates and around half the votes.

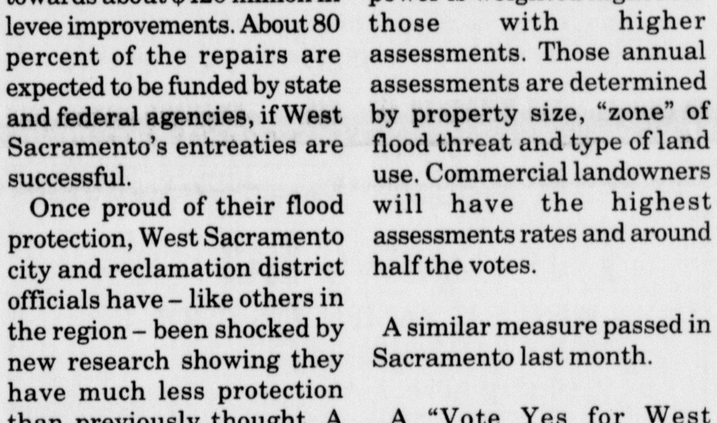
A similar measure passed in Sacramento last month.

A "Vote Yes for West Sacramento Flood Protection" group, which includes developers and business owners, has been campaigning for passage of the local assessment.

A public question-and-answer session on the assessment is planned for the public at city hall, 1110 West Capitol Avenue, at 6:30 p.m. on June 5.

Ballots are due by July 10.

Lending a hand



West Sacramento 'Tiger Cubs' brought gloves and trash bags to Riverwalk Park on Earth Day last month to help clean things up.

Jazz Fest at ballpark

This weekend's festivities as the Sacramento Jazz Festival will spill over into West Sacramento's Raley Field.

That minor-league ballpark near South River Road and Riske Lane has three venues: West Sax landing, a grassy picnic area; Way Station, with 450 theater-style seats on the west end of the concourse; and Raley's RV Pavilian in the RV parking lot.

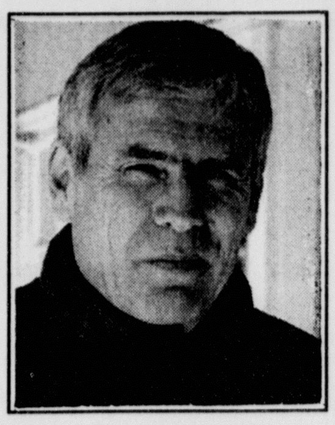
Are you happy?

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

A friend of mine recently gave me a copy of a Wall Street Journal article to read entitled "No Satisfaction: Why What You Have Is Never Enough." It was written by a man named Jonathan Clements and it made a number of very interesting points. For instance, Clements says that although surveys show that most Americans are financially better off than ever, they don't report being any happier.

"We constantly hanker after fancier cars and fatter paychecks," wrote Clements, "and initially, such things boost our happiness, but the glow of satisfaction quickly fades and soon we're yearning for something else."

Clements went on to point out that, "We fail to anticipate how quickly we will adapt to improvements in out lives. We think everything will be wonderful when we move into the bigger house. We don't realize that, after a few months, we will take the extra space for granted."

Clements concluded that human beings aren't really built to be happy. Rather, we are built to survive and reproduce, and that working hard and properly raising our children has much more to do with our personal happiness than just about anything else.

Reading Clements' article reminded me of a short story I read many years ago entitled "Gooseberries". It was penned by the famous Russian writer, Anton Chekhov, and was first published in 1898. It dealt with the theme of personal happiness -- what it is, and maybe what it isn't.

Chekhov's story is told by Ivan Ivanych and revolves around his brother, Nikolay, who is a couple of years younger than Ivan and stuck toiling away in a government office, warming a seat that he hates and stuck in a profession he can't stand. Slowly but surely, Nikolay begins dreaming of someday owning his own property on the banks of a river in the country where he can have bird-houses, garden paths, ponds, animals, and his own gooseberry bushes. It isn't long before his whole life is consumed with this goal and he is absolutely sure he can never be truly happy unless his dream of a life in the country can someday become reality. He begins drawing plans for his grand estate and depriving himself of food, fun and drink so he will someday have enough money to purchase it. He becomes terribly stingy, dresses like a beggar and alienates all of his friends and family because all he thinks of and talks about is someday owning property in the country.

Years pass, and for the sake of obtaining some property with a gooseberry patch, he marries a rich, elderly, homely widow whom he is glad to see die three years later, leaving him all her money. He quickly finds 300 acres he can now afford and it proves to be everything he had ever wanted. It has a big house, servants quarters, and in time, a pond for ducks, a park, and scores of gooseberry bushes.

Nikolay quietly settles down to the life of a country gentleman, his dream fulfilled, his happiness now assured. It has taken him over 20 years, he has alienated all of the people who ever loved him and married a woman he couldn't stand, but he is finally happy. He is no longer a poor, timid clerk, but rather a real landowner and a gentleman.

Ivan visits his brother and tells us that, "I saw a truly happy man, one whose cherished dream had so obviously come true, who had attained his goal in life, who had got what he wanted, who was satisfied with his lot and himself."

Ivan, however, can't get over the fact that his brother is now totally oblivious to real life; "To the insolence and idleness of the strong, the ignorance and brutishness of the weak, the horrible poverty all around him, of overcrowding, drunkenness, hypocrisy, and lying." How can such a man be happy, Ivan asks himself.

Maybe we trick ourselves into thinking we're happy, Ivan decides. And we do such a good of it that, "We see people go to market, eat by day, sleep by night, babble nonsense, marry, grow old, and good-naturedly drag their dead to the cemetery, but we do not see or hear those who suffer, and what is terrible in life goes on somewhere behind the scenes; obviously the happy man is at ease only because the unhappy ones bear their burdens in silence, and without this silence, happiness would be impossible."

Anyway, after reading Chekhov's little story, I found myself thinking that maybe, just maybe, we've got it all wrong. This happiness thing we've all bought into, does it really even exist? And if a person like Nikolay Ivanych can be genuinely happy, using such horrible means to get there, then maybe it's not really worth all the precious time and energy we spend on its pursuit anyway.

Could it be that Chekhov is right when he has his protagonist say, "If life has a meaning and a purpose, that meaning and purpose is not our own personal happiness, but something far greater and more rational. Do good!"

Broken: The Disability Rating System

Severely injured personnel being given low disability ratings is a topic near and dear to my heart. It's been difficult to hear all the stories and have to wonder if the low ratings stem from incompetence — or are intentional. Now we have some answers — not all, but some.

In 2006, the Secretary of the Army directed the Inspector General to conduct an inspection of the Army Physical Disability Evaluation System to "determine if policies, procedures and execution meet the needs of soldiers and the institution of the Army." The 311-page report recently came out. Here's some of what it reveals.

- Time standards are not being met. The Army isn't keeping to the DoD standards (perhaps only considering them to be guidelines?) for processing Medical Evaluation Board cases.
- There's no formal or standardized training for commanders, medical hold and medical hold cadre, USAPDA personnel, medical board officers and physical evaluation board liaison officers. There is no course of instruction to train those who evaluate the injuries of soldiers.
- Databases used to track information are inaccurate and unreliable, partly because of lack of training, and it leads to "inaccurate reporting" of the status of soldiers in the system.

And here's a bad combination: The majority of soldiers interviewed didn't understand the differences between the Army and VA disability ratings, AND the majority of medical-holdover soldiers had little or no contact with their home station unit or chain of command.

Keep 'em in the dark and out of touch, and you get a soldier who doesn't know to fight for a higher disability rating.

The Sacramento Kings started their search for a new coach last week, interviewing Reggie Theus, Scott Brooks and Kurt Rambis but the most important news regarding the Kings 2008 season, is the draft lottery.

The Kings will be praying for a lucky bounce from the lottery ping pong ball on Tuesday night in Secaucus, N.J. along with the other 14 teams that missed the playoffs. The Kings finished the season tied for the eighth-worst record which give them a 1.8 percent chance of winning the first pick and 2.12 percent chance of nailing down the second pick.

The Kings management is not use to being at the lottery, but failing to reach the playoffs for the first time in eight years has landed the Maloof's and their beloved Kings in New Jersey in hope of landing one of the lottery's top three picks. The draft is set for June 28th with the top five picks being Greg Oden, Kevin Durant, Al Horford, Corey Brewer and Yi Jianlian another 7-footer from China.

Diamond Notes

The Oakland A's (22-22) won the "Battle of the Bay" by whipping the Giants in two of their three games including beating up Barry Zito in his pitching debut in a Giants uniform against his old teammates. Zito couldn't find the plate and actually walked three players in the first inning. The Giants pitching staff actually ended up issuing 13 walks in their 15 to 3 slacking by the A's.

The A's pounded the Giants pitching for 15 runs in the first game and then skated by on Saturday with a 4-2 win after red-hot Jack Cust crushed a three run home run in the first inning to bring his first two week total with the A's to eight with 20 RBI' s. Giants pitching ace, Matt Morris (5-1) saved the G-Men from getting swept by pitching a two-hit gem while striking out nine.

The Giants (22-22) finished up their road trip at 4-6 but the real news is still the Barry Bonds watch. Bonds batting slump and has him stuck in a home run rut for 10 games without a HR. Barry still has 11 HR's this season but trails Hammering Hank Aaron's 755 home run record by 11 round trippers.

The A's missed their first sweep of the season last week but will get another chance at the Giants when they play again on June 8-10 at AT&T Park. The A's, who finished their home stand at 5-5, have used the disabled list 10 times this season after only 15 uses in 2006.

Speaking of injuries, the A's called up River Cats outfielder Hiram Bocachica to fill in while A's outfielder, Mark Kotsay, rehabs in West Sacramento and also called up right-hander Colby Lewis to start on Tuesday against the White Sox. One of the A's starters, Esteban Loaiza, is also rehabbing with the Gatos and is scheduled to pitch on Tuesday at Raley Field.

The A's will travel to Chicago during the week to play the White Sox and will end up in Baltimore for a Memorial Weekend series against the Orioles. The Giants will be at home this week battling the Astros and the Rockies this weekend.

The River Cats (27-17) are home at Raley Field this week but will travel on Friday to Colorado Springs for a holiday four game series.

The surreal sight in West Sacramento late last week included tens of thousands of spectators arriving from around the region, parking in a makeshift lot near the Daniel Palamidessi Bridge and walking to the top of the levee that forms the south side of the ship-turning basin. On Thursday, at least a half-dozen TV crews shared the levee, gazing over the whales, which surfaced every few minutes for a breath. A half-dozen more TV vans were parked at the entrance to the port – site of press briefings.

By the weekend, whale-watching in West Sacramento was so popular that Caltrans signs along the freeway in Davis and Sacramento instructed drivers headed for the port to use Jefferson Boulevard. West Sacramento officials discouraged visitors – fearing for public safety, damage to the levees and stress on the whales. But they did not keep people away.

Boaters at the port – sailors, fishermen and rowers from UC Davis and the River City Rowing Club – were all kept off the water until the whales left.

The port and deepwater channel were created in the mid 1960s. Just over 20 years ago, a humpback whale nicknamed "Humphrey" famously swam almost all the way up to West Sacramento and the port. He was escorted back to the Bay successfully – an episode recalled last Thursday by Pieter Folkens, research associate with the Alaska Whale Foundation.

"We've never had a baleen whale this far up the river before," Folkens said. "We've also never had a cow and calf combination. We're in new territory here. Humphrey was not a cow-calf pair and Humphrey was not injured in any way."

The two cetacean visitors to West Sacramento last week were indeed hurt.

"Both animals have injuries," said Frances Gulland of the Marine Mammal Center in Sausalito. "The mother has a wound on its back typical of a propeller wound. The calf has a similar wound."

Scientists believed the mother's wound did not go all the way through its layer of blubber, and probably wasn't critical. The calf's wound, on the lower part of its body, proved harder to assess.

Gulland and Folkens were part of a rescue effort on Thursday that drew help from theirs and other agencies – including the U.S. Coast Guard, local law enforcement agencies and others. After a morning press conference – chaired by California Lieutenant Governor John Garamendi – the Coast Guard vessel motored to the mouth of the turning basin and sent "hydrophonic sounds" carrying what were hoped to be appropriate whale-luring messages.

"With those sounds, we will attempt to lure the whales down the channel and out to sea," explained Coast Guard lieutenant Amy Marrs before the rescue effort.

Folkens explained that the whale sounds would include recordings of "gurgles and chirps" emitted by feeding humpbacks.

The plan was to follow the whales with a flotilla of small boats, at a discrete distance, in order to discourage the whales from changing their minds.

How fast does a humpback swim?

"About one to three knots. A panicked whale can do about seven knots," answered Gulland. "We have about 70 miles to go. It could take two or three days."

An expectant crowd gathered as the rescue effort started. The whales, though, ignored the hydrophonic invitation. They swam laps or figure-eights at apparent leisure around the turning basin, rewarding spectators with visits to the surface every three or five minutes.

At the end of the day, rescuers gave up. They planned to regroup this week, if needed, to try driving the whales with "negative" sounds – banging on pipes held underwater.

Throughout, rescuers have been watching the whales for signs of stress, including skin problems caused by their time in freshwater. And the whales have probably been eating poorly, away from their usual diet of krill and schools of small fish, which they typically injest and then strain through the "baleen" filter in the mouths.

Finally, on Sunday, the whales' plans changed when the tugboats started to work.

The whales left the turning basin, too, coming alongside the ship being attended by the boats and – after some indecision, and with "encouragement" from small boats of researchers and Coast Guard personnel – making it past the ship and continuing south.

"When the two whales got alongside the ship, they started swimming back and forth," said Peter Folks of West Sacramento, watching from near Marshall Road. "The boats were maneuvering to keep the whales from going back to the port. The mother whale finally went past the ship's stern but the calf continued swimming back and forth abreast of the ship. At one point, it stuck its nose out of the water next to the ship, and at another point it swam up to one of the patrol boats. The mother returned to the stern of the ship and the baby joined her."

After about 20 minutes of "herding" efforts, said Folks, the whales started south again at around five miles per hour.

A bridge at Rio Vista has proven problematic for the whales' continuing voyage though. Experts suggest the whales are bothered by vibrations from traffic transmitted through bridge pilings. Scientists were still trying to "herd" the whales past the Rio Vista as of yesterday.

The mother and calf – nicknamed "Delta" and "Dawn" by Garamendi and others – were the first whales sighted at West Sacramento's port, although boaters have occasionally spotted other wayward species including the very occasional sea lion.

Humpbacks are an endangered species, formerly hunted extensively. They winter in Hawaii or Mexico and migrate to Alaska to feed in the summer. They grow to about 50 feet long and may live up to 80 years. A humpback calf is born about 15 feet long and weighing several thousand pounds.

Researchers have speculated that the two wayward whales may have simply veered through the Golden Gate into San Francisco Bay, then taken a wrong turn continued north (the direction of their spring migration) in the deep water channel. Or perhaps they sought refuge away from the Bay and ocean to heal from their injuries.

Doing G.R.E.A.T.

5th grader William Torres with Dep. Chief Henry Serrano & Officer Sean Saylor

By Sean Alexander, special to the News-Ledger

The West Sacramento Police Department held a graduation ceremony for Alyce Norman Elementary School fifth grade students who participated in the G.R.E.A.T. (Gang Reistance Education Training) pilot program last week in the school cafeteria.

Deputy Chief of Police, Henry Serran and School Resource Office, Sean Saylor, were featured speakers at the ceremony which recognized the students' completion of the program. The students surprised Officer Saylor with a hand-made book and cards of appreciation. All participants celebrated after the ceremony with cake and punch served by WSPD volunteers.

The G.R.E.A.T. program focuses on providing life skills to students to help them avoid delinquent behavior and violence, while developing a postive bond between law enforcement and youth.

West Sacramento police officers Saylor and Nora McDowell were the instructors of the six-week course, which featured lessons in anger management, communicating clear messages, understanding our similarities and differences and respecting others. Each lesson was accompanied by a parent letter that students took home explaining the lesson and encouraging parent/student discussion about the topic.

G.R.E.A.T. has developed partnerships throughout the United States and the current West Sacramento program is in the pilot phase. Plans to extend the program throughout the Washington Unified School District are under way, should funding be made available for the 2007-08 school year.

PARENT-TEACHER CLUB WILL ENTERTAIN TOMORROW NIGHT

No pains are being spared to make the Parent-Teacher entertainment tomorrow night a splendid success.

Everybody has been hard at work and from present appearances there should be a great crowd to help swell the funds of the association, so that more playground apparatus may be secured.

Refreshments will be served and some catchy stunts will be pulled off.

John McAuliffe, who has been living in the building recently purchased by Mrs. Belle Porter, has moved to the home of his mother in Oak Park.

Mrs. R. Saylor (Gladys Bocarde) of Roseville spent Tuesday visiting friends and relatives in Washington.

F. L. White has filed his application as a candidate for the position of School Trustee to succeed himself. The polls will be open from 1:30 to 5:30 Friday afternoon.

Mrs. William Cook, who has been occupying a flat above the Crenshaw garage, has moved to the Buchanan house.

A committee to serve refreshments at the dance planned by the Parent-Teacher Association for March 27th has been named as follows: Mrs. S. T Rickard, Mrs. H. A. Palm, Mrs. F. De Riso and Mrs. I. K. Manchester.

Julius Noyes and Albert Caffaro went to Woodland on business last Monday.

Mrs. S. C. Curtis, with her son and the wife of the latter, Mr. and Mrs. Harley Curtis, have come to Washington to join her son, Charles White. The newcomers are living at a residence on B street.

Miss Julia McWilliams, teacher of the third and fourth grades in the Washington school, who has been confined to her home by illness, has returned to her work.

Lucille Rossi, who has been ill with pneumonia for several weeks, is improved slightly.

Mrs. Tony Sanchez is confined to her home in Riverbank by illness, but is improving rapidly.

Mrs. M. Conzetti, accompanied by Dorris Norton and Lillian Lear, were visitors last Sunday in Roseville.

SEVERAL REFUSALS TO SIGN PLEDGE FOR GAS SUPPLY

Captain G. B. Baidwin of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company has informed The Independent that several people have refused to sign the gas pledge for a period of three years, advancing the reason that they cannot pledge themselves for so long a period, and some complain about the expense of installing pipes to connect with stoves.

In contravention Captain Baldwin adds, that not only will the mains be laid through the streets but the corporation will furnish 50 feet of pipe to convey gas through the lot of the consumer. All then that would be necesary is the length that would form the riser to the stove.

Previously this matter was not explained because it was not believed the company would be so liberal in supplying the property owners with the requisite pipe.

Altogether seventy-seven signatures of property owners were secured. And on the strength of that showing the corporation will go ahead believing that the others will gradually come in when they see the beneficial results of the use of gas for home consumption. Captain Baldwin claims that thirty-six householders refused to pledge for the supply for a period of three years.

Plans and specifications have been fully developed by the company, and the appropriation in the amount of $150,000 has been laid aside for the specific purpose of building the gas main from Sacramento to Woodland and intermediate points.

Canvassers of the company are still continuing the work of securing names, and any one who is anxious to secure a supply and hasn't seen the canvasser should register at the headquarters, at Eleventh and K streets, Sacramento.

Estimates have been furnished for an etxension to Riverbank, and surveyors are at work now estimating the amount of extra cost needed to supply that suburb.

Hayward Reed has interested himself to a great extent in this, with the result that Riverbank will likely get a supply if funds for the extension are advanced by interested parties.

FIBER PRODUCTS PLANT TURNING OUT MATERIAL FOR THE MARKET

Marketable material in the shape of wallboard, insulating material, and other products are now being turned out by the U. S. Fiber Products Company plant in West Sacramento.

As a matter of fact the factory has been in operation during the past ten days, but officials did not want the fact known because they feared the presence of visitors and the applications of many workers desirous to secure places of employment.

A great deal of trouble was experienced in securing the necessary machinery to start the plant in regular manufacture, but now that difficulty has been overcome and the purpose of the corporation is being fulfilled.

Visitors are not welcome for the time being at the great plant, because all the machinery being new and the process being a secret intruders cannot be accommodated until the plant is running without hitch.

The plant of the Fiber Products Company has been completed at an expenditure of about $250,000. It will be a means of employment for many years to come, and will be the real nucleus of the great manufacturing center that will be located in West Sacramento.

At this writing all the necessary hands are employed, but others will be needed later on. Experienced men in this line of manufacture are scarce, but green hands are taken care of by the management so as to make them experts.

The plant at this moment is going quietly at about half its capacity, but in the near future it will be rushed to its greatest extent, for the demand on goods is continuous.

S. P. PLANS ARE COMPLETE TO EXTEND CONNECTIONS WITH VIRDEN PLANT SITE

TWO CROSSINGS AT GRADE MUST BE MADE AND PERMISSION OF RAILROAD COMMISSION FOR THESE HAS BEEN ASKED

Through the efforts of C. E. Virden the Southern Pacific has been induced to extend a branch line to the Virden plant so that shipments of material may be made direct to the ground of the Virden Packing Company.

The extension will presumably be made from the spur track now existing on Harriet street and southward through the block between the levee and Second street in Washington to cross the Sacramento Northern R. R. and the San Francisco and Sacramento R. R. immediately west of the M-street bridge.

This information was given The Independent yesterday by Virden and is of such manifest interest to the residents of this section of Yolo County that it means an unprecedented development for the district.

The cost of installation will mean an expenditure to the Southern Pacific Co. of at least $250,000.

During years past or since the West Sacramento Co. purchased the property between Front and Second streets and south to the Sacramento Northern embaukment a move of this kind was looked for and now that the assurance has been made the development anticipated will be realized.

In the block mentioned above the Southern Pacific owns a right of way that has been vacant during many years. The building of the line will mean the removal of the shops of the Sacramento Transportation Co. with the probability of filling by suction dredger all that property south of Harriet street.

Should the filling be done it will mean that the water front north of the M-street bridge will immediately become the location for wharves and shipping facilities.

No better factory sites exist in and around Sacramento than the property just mentioned. It is convenient to river transportation, two lines of electric roads and the Southern Pacific Co. It has lain idle for several years but will not remain so long.

Virden is authority for the statement that the plans and specifications are already completed and that the work of construction may be started at any moment or as soon as the Railroad Commission grants permission for grade crossings near the M-street bridge.

In this work there is the probability that all the property in Washington south of the Southern Pacific line on Harriet street may be filled. Some of the principal owners have signified their willingness to join in the project and only a few with small holdings refuse.

The Independent has often predicted that the Yolo side of the river is destined to become the factory center for Sacramento City and already realization is being accomplished.

EDITORS WILL AIR VIEWS TO HELP BOYS' MEMORIAL HALL

Woodland, March 25.—At the next regular meeting of the Woman's County and City Council on Monday evening, March 29th, at 8 o'clock, in the rooms of the Board of Trade, the speakers will be the editors of the Woodland papers. Paul Leake will tell of the joys and sorrows of an editor; Mr. Mixon, is the newspaper a help or a hindrance to community spirit; Mrs. S. A. Huston, of her views of the mission of the newspaper.

Remember that the council is the civic section of the Town and Country Club, devoted to the interests of the whole county, and pledged to further the efforts to secure a suitable memorial hall for Yolo County veterans of the great war.

Yolo Independent is the home paper for 4,000 people.

BOY FALLS INTO RIVER WHILE AT PLAY; DROWNED.

Mitchell Maltsioss, 10-year-old school boy, while at play on the bank of the Sacramento River near Riverbank last Sunday, slipped into the river and was drowned. The boy's body has not yet been recovered. The death was reported to Constable Buckingham of Washington. The boy was the son of Russian residents of Riverbank and is survived also by three brothers and two sisters.

Levees need fixing: vote 'yes'

Can you remember an easier decision on a ballot?

This week, West Sacramento property owners will be getting in the mail a chance to vote "yes" or "no" on a new flood assessment tax. If the assessment passes, it will cost most local homeowners around $100 to $200 per year and pay for about ten percent of the bill for $420 million in planned levee improvements.

A "yes" result will also lower a lot of people's flood insurance costs and – more importantly – start to reduce the risk of a catastrophic flood in the "bowl" that is West Sacramento.

Flooding is a real threat here. Hurricane Katrina certainly raised public awareness of just how real a flood can be, and the Sacramento area has flooding dangers just as high as those in New Orleans. Just a year ago, rain pounded this region until West Sacramento was just "one storm away" from having a serious flood threat.

In any given year, there is a better than one in a hundred chance of a flood (which will probably put at least several feet of water into your house) in West Sacramento. Those aren't good odds when you're talking about a potential catastrophe.

The planned levee improvements are meant to cut that risk in half, bringing West Sacramento to "200 year" flood protection.

As one resident said "West Sacramento is a floodplain. You do what you've got to do."

'No' on school bond

In the past few days, I, my wife, and our neighbors have started receiving push polls for the newly proposed bond issue. As the bond is currently proposed I will oppose it.

In the past I have worked on and supported the local school bonds for WUSD. This bond I can not support. I can not support it because they, the school board and administration, are going to waste money on changing all schools to K-8, increasing school sizes to 900+, and getting rid of GSMS.

When I was on the school board, I pushed strongly for K-8 schools, but not district wide. I advocated for K-8 schools with populations between 500 and 700 students, not 900. I supported the addition of three K-8 schools in the district as an ADD to educational opportunities, not the only way of doing K-8 education. I always supported Golden State and I do not support the elimination of it.

Using school district data I have developed plans for converting (Bryte / Alyce Norman) into a K-8 complex, Westmore Oaks into a K-8, and replacing the small classrooms at Southport, all of this for a cost of less than $10 million dollars instead of $36 million as proposed. This proposal will also allow our school district to add hundreds of students without building any additional schools.

In fairness to the administration and school board I have forwarded the detailed plans for a much less expensive conversion to them. I can take time and answer any questions. I can sit down with the board, staff and administration and make the plan work financially and educationally. I am available and the school district has my number.

I want what is best for our children. I also want what is best for West Sacramento and our tax payers. Therefore, be it resolved, I oppose the proposed bond issue and will do all I can to defeat it.

Change trolley route

What West Sacramento should do is extend the route on the Tourist Trolley Bus to Jefferson Boulevard along West Capitol Avenue and loop back to Old Sacramento! This new route would be a more feasible solution and save taxpayers money on both sides of the river.

Lets stretch out the route for the Tourist Trolley Bus to save money and continue to use our local buses to Old Sacramento!

SPORTS from p. 3

NBA Playoffs

The Conference Championships are set, with the Detroit Pistons winning the first of their best of seven game series against Cleveland on Monday while San Antonio Spurs also handed the Utah Jazz their first loss in the Western Conference Championships on Sunday. So, with that said who will end up playing in the 2007 NBA Championship?

Well, the odds are with the Pistons but the Cavs do have some young players including King James that can stage a big upset. But, the Pistons beat the Cavs 3-1 during the regular season holding them to an average of only 83 points. If the Cavs can win game 2 in Detroit on Thursday I give them a chance to stretch the series to seven but the Pistons should win this battle.

In the Western Conference the Spurs have too much fire power and the Jazz haven't won a game in San Antonio in 17 tries. The Jazz are tough at home but it won't be enough to stop the Spurs wagon train to the NBA Championship. Spurs in Six!

Enjoy your day – see ya next week.

Health activist award goes to Ann Jones

West Sacramento's Ann Jones has received the annual John Siden Community Service Award from the Salud Clinic Advisory Board. The award was given at last week's city council meeting.

Jones was a ten-year member of the clinic's advisory board, served six years on the Yolo County Health Council, and has served on the city's commission on aging and other committees dealing with senior issues.

She was "instrumental" in relocating county services to the service center on Jefferson Boulevard in West Sacramento and helped raise funds for outdoor play equipment at the center.

Jones has worked for the state department of health and often "went above and beyond the call of duty to help ensure services were meeting the needs of the community residents," according to the Salud board.

William H. Harrison, the ninth President of the United States, served the shortest term. He died from pneumonia 30 days after he was inaugurated in 1841.
